GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir, - The pertinent remarks of Mr. Mills in the assembly a few evenings ago "that the country was being governed by commission," were not only appropriate, but will also be accepted as the death-knell of a system, happily modern, that is sapping and undermining the functions of the Parliament of the country, and, in most cases, relegating the people's representatives to obscurity.

Why these accusations? Are not the numbers of unemployment as huge and as big as of old to decide the fact that a new railway should be built? Is it not reasonable Minister of a department no longer to be able to administer the business of its office? Are not the responsible body of Ministers, Ministers of the Parliament, and practically take the affairs of the entire out of Ministerial control, and determine both the policy and administration of the entire Department of the Government. This is what must be done, appropriately, to turn a Government by dummies. I would like to see passed a correct statement of the total cost of the railways of the Government, by the Civil Service Reorganisation Commission, and I do not hesitate to say that the amount would surpass the cost of the operations of the most expensive Government absorbing the saving effected by a sensible and unworthy policy of chicanery and cutting down (in some cases to almost starvation) the salaries of many Civil servants—a class who are devoted to the good of the country and are ready to sacrifice their lives for the sake of the country. If injustice they may be subjected to. While I am on this subject, I would like to ask why, in its recommendations, this commission did not advise the introduction of the large and fat salaries of the senior officers? Why were the moderate or smaller salaries paid at all? It was over there: the weak must stay on the wall. Can the heads of Departments, or

...kind being fed with them, have and duties
...being reduced, are going to take any interest
...in the discharge of their duties? Certainly
...; they would be more than human if they did, and
...will especially be the case with those holding im...portant and responsible positions outside and in its
...did particularly, so that, if not unachievable, certainly
...refractory performance of duty may be expected a
...one of many of the advantages of "government by
...ommissionaries."

It is to be hoped, in the best interest of the coun-
...the

that the people's representatives will no longer submit to the indignity of their high functions being usurped by irresponsible commissions, which have "nothing to be saved nor bodies to be kicked."

June 13. I am, &c. THOMAS BROWN.

THE SYDNEY HOSPITAL

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The question of the completion of the Sydney hospital formed the subject of debate by the Medical Association at its last meeting, and, from the tenor of its speeches, it would appear that that body filled with indignation that the present warhead should be known as the Sydney Hospital, as it is permitted to function as an open house for the public while the work of proceeding with the substantial portion in close proximity has been stopped for several months for some years. The Association has accordingly decided to approach the Government, and urge on the completion of the work already commenced.

[illegible]

g in matters of this kind, and the association does not share credit for the interest it is evincing in this important matter under reference. The resolution was passed unanimously at a meeting of some 50 members of the profession, and as the association numbers about 100 members, who received due notice that the question was coming on for discussion, and expressed an objection thereto, it is evident that the very large majority of the profession is in favour of the completion of a new and improved structure, notwithstanding statements to the contrary. If, as was stated, another $10,000 will be sufficient to complete a building suitable for the accommodation of 200 patients if it would be preferable for the country, in an economic sense, to raise this amount than to submit to the waste of $750,000 already sunk in the present, inadequate building. If this has been the case, it is probable for the building which it was the original intention to erect upon it, the time for objection has surely passed. When we contemplate the figures quoted and weigh the urgency of the matter, it is therefore to be hoped that the efforts of the association to terminate the project will be abandoned.

made available for the treatment of acute cases, the requirements of Sydney could be met at the present time and in the far future. Possibly the Government may see the force of the arguments which will be adduced in the despatch of the Medical Association, and speedily take the important matter so long permitted to remain in abeyance.

I am, &c.,

THE WELL-ABUSED BOOK FIND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—Dr. Creed's proposed bill to protect unwary people from becoming the victims of willbook makers may or may not be a necessity. It assumes the existing necessity of protecting unwary or in other words (why mince matters?) people so hopelessly stupid as to attach their signatures to a contract seldom exceeding half a dozen lines, which in plain words reads: "I agree to receive and pay for say 25 lines of a certain publication, or ten times the amount of the same, under the penalty that the liability does not extend five or ten allings; and if it be also true, as the pointed necessity of this bill implies, that the general public is really devoid of common sense, and rubbers and their agents are so crafty, that nothing short of a revolutionary enactment can now will them, then all the proposed "red line" save at least the "reach" of the law, is a universal and a constructive simplicity? As well draw a line of red to protect the lamb from the wolf. There can be no exception taken to the exposure and condemnation of fraud of whatever kind; and for that matter neither should wield carabines were allowed to go ashore. Good out to imply fraud to all book publishers are meant rapidly to a very large portion of the public and legally avail themselves of the advantages that part of the publications are sold, because, fourth, a few knaves and rascals have joined these, as if to do as they stigmatize all medical men as empirics (and to travel men to have their diplomas, defaced with and lines, pinned to their breasts) and all students as fools because there are quacks

and their silly adherents in the community.
Our

man has been said again and again to be a creature of vituperation and weak satirical tendencies. The good taste, has been hurled against the whole of it, much so that it is becoming fashionable to repair the man who retails the means for the acquisition of knowledge and the highest culture as very rude in relation to the man who retains ribbons and sandals.
 It is to be regretted that the ready detractors of this man have been obliged to take to their cabinet his eyes a trifle from above, to the great
 of his, appeared as a dark shadow of the silencing.
 It is a truth, already proven, that the great quantity of our artists are colored, and even, leading families ers, whose only sin is that they are endeavoring to be honestly, and who are as incapable of fraud as the highly-respected publishing firms whom they resent. It is a curious coincidence, that whilst the pretence of contemporary thinkers are endeavoring to discover new methods for the diffusion of knowledge, there should arise a class of persons who condemn one of the most efficient means to that end. Would it be possible to estimate the number of men who owe their advancement in science, art, and literature to publishers of his class? I think, in parts, but for whose spirited enterprise the the production of the age would remain unaltered. It is probable to keep pace with the march of civilization, the State maintains scientific institutions, and the people are published, and public libraries are established, and the diffusion of knowledge, and, there, would be the causality in the stimulating for the suppression of canvassers as publishers, who are the greatest distributors of knowledge. It may be contended that suppressor canvassers (a consumption obviously aimed at) do not necessarily mean the suppression of publishers. The latter, however, cannot be maintained. Trending are indispensable to a part of the population, and are sold to publishers of light literature, whose publications are cheap and readily bought if favourably reviewed. It is not, therefore, for the publisher to employ the most eminent artist and the best authors, besides superior materials. All these entail a heavy expenditure of money and, naturally, the works are costly. The price must therefore be decided in, as to whether these works should be confined to the wealthy only, or if they should be distributed amongst the people? That is a problem, which is no other course open but to encourage the artist.

ness. All the legislation in the world will not convert an appreciator of books from welcoming his very good friend the book canvasser, who keeps him posted up in the world of literature, science, and art, and who makes him the opportunity of judging the merits of a literary work unbiased by the reviewer. As for the book canvasser's declaimer, his needs no protection for seeking new ground for the first time in his life induced perhaps a good or bad ; a matter of no moment to me—he will always regard the book agent with kind regards, having been the cause of a useless expenditure of time.

THE REGISTRATION OF LIASES

— TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD —

Sir,—May I through your columns draw the attention of the public to a peculiar rule in connection with the Stamp Office. To register a lease under the Real Property Act the deed must be executed and stamped duplicate; but to stamp a deed in duplicate does not make it a lease, and a man would suppose, the pay-to the duty alone, with perhaps a small fee for extra stamp, but the payment of the duty two years, provided the single duty does not exceed $1. The not, I maintain, a fair way of interesting the Act for every $100 of yearly rent. I have seen the Act provided that the stamp duty is a lesser one for every $100 of yearly rent. But I am not sure, it is not too. This makes it itself. Consider whether maintain that there is no necessity stamp cases is duplicate. The stamped copy must be placed before registration can be effected, and the stamp is then noted on the other copy by the clerk in and Titles Office. To be consistent, the Office owner should require the registration copies of the registered under the Registration Act to be stamped and sealed. It would be absurd, and so, I submit, is the present system of stamping leases in duplicate.

Yours &c.,
A. L. P.
